

Thank you for your interest in our research project.

The Behavioral Science Lab at Georgia State University is conducting federally funded research on romantic relationships, alcohol, attitudes, and behavior.

We are seeking romantic couples who are married, engaged, or have been dating for at least one month to participate in this research. If you qualify and decide to volunteer, compensation can range from $10 to $100 per person for completing questionnaires and then participating in an experiment at GSU.

In order to determine your eligibility for the study, you and your partner must first be deemed eligible. This requires you to complete a brief series of questions online. It will take less than five minutes to answer these questions which help us to determine whether you may be eligible for the study.

If you do not want to complete these questions online, you can call us at 404-413-6199. Someone from our staff will contact you, provide you with more information about the study, and conduct an interview on the phone. You can also contact us if you like more information.
